Introduction and history of Buddhism Burmese Art in Burma

Burma first came in contact with Buddhism with the trade relationship with India. Many messengers and monks were sent to Thaton to spread the teaching of the Buddha by the King Ashoka of India. A trading centre of Southern Burma, Thaton was the main trade hub for trade between India and Burma. This led to the increase of contact with the traders from India in Burma and so did the religious beliefs.

The life of the historical Buddha emerges in several layers from the classical Buddhist literature. The earliest version does not appear in any one text, but can only be pieced together from incidents recorded in the Pali sutta (Skt. sutra) and vinaya literature of the Theravada tradition. Later texts of the Mahasanghika, Sarvastivada, and Mahayana traditions embellish the bare outline that
