How investors benefit from active management

2008 2009 raised their sensitivity to downside protection. Investors who use active management can benefit from downside protection during periods of market weakness. Active managers can take steps to protect the assets of the fund by switching to safer investments such as cash. In contrast, the indexing mandate offers no flexibility and is to

Three Reasons to Consider Active Management

Active Versus Passive Management is Cyclical. The fact of the matter is that both styles go in and out of favor. While passive management is currently wearing the crown, it was the active camp that outperformed passive in nine out of 10 years during the 2000-2009 period. During the 1990s, passive bested active seven out of 10 years.
