Lynore Geia Indigenous voices are re emerging We are

We re throwing off the imposter s blanket to represent our selves once again. I believe we are living in a time where institutions of power are changing. Throughout our nations, political narratives are being altered. Across Australia windows of opportunity are opening for Indigenous people to assert our enduring culture, intellect, and the realisation of our strength and resilience in walking two worlds. <http://home.schoolnutritionandfitness.com/Lynore-Geia--Indigenous-voices-are-re-emerging--We-are--.pdf>

Why Integrating Indigenous Voices is Key in Tackling

It is up to us to make our own decisions about how we take care of our planet and what contributions we make. But before any of that can happen, we need to make sure we are armed with every possible source of information out there. Indigenous voices are a crucial part of the conversation. We just need to start listening.
