Language revitalization and radical politics Language on Indigenous scholars such as Wesley Leonard, Jenny Davis, and Michelle M Jacob are increasingly tying language revitalization to a critique of colonialism. Feargal Mac Ionnrachtaigh, in discussing the radical language politics of political prisoners in what is currently Northern Ireland, ties their language revitalization work to broader struggles against colonialism and neo-colonial globalization.

How to Begin an Indigenous Language Revitalization Initiative

Projects should be initiated by people who are interested in or active in the revitalization of a First Nations' language. One person who is dedicated to the cause can make a great difference, but so much more can be achieved once the support of the community is gained.

Revitalizing Indigenous Languages Introduction

While any individual can take up the cause of indigenous language revitalization by learning and speaking the language, programs of language revitalization at the community or wider levels have an increased chance for success if they are carefully researched in the manner described by Greymorning, Rubin, Anonby, and others in this volume.

Language Revitalization How to Resurrect Dying Languages

In the 1970s, the Hawaiian language seemed poised for extinction. Only about 2,000 native speakers remained, and most were over age 60. Then a dedicated group of advocates launched immersion schools, a Hawaiian radio program, and an island-wide movement to resuscitate the melodious language. Today more than 18,600 people speak Hawaiian as fluently as they speak English.

Native Language Preservation Revitalization Restoration

In 2012, OHS released a Tribal Language Report that provided information on the success, progress, and challenges experienced by tribal programs as they work to preserve, revitalize, and maintain their tribal languages. The report highlighted a misperception among some tribal programs that the full integration of tribal language and culture in Head Start and Early Head Start programs was inconsistent with Head Start Program Performance Standards.

Language revitalization Wikipedia

Language revitalization, also referred to as language revival or reversing language shift, is an attempt to halt or reverse the decline of a language or to revive an extinct one. Those involved can include parties such as linguists, cultural or community groups, or governments. Some argue for a distinction between language revival (the resurrection of a dead language with no existing native speakers) and language revitalization (the rescue of a "dying" language).

Why Indigenous languages matter Canadian Geographic

In 1992 Michael Krauss, then head of the Alaska Native Language Center in Fairbanks, published The World's Languages in Crisis, one of the most disturbing scientific papers ever written. It began with a litany of loss. Among the Eyak of Alaska's Copper River, where Krauss had worked, there remained but two speakers of the language, both elderly.
