Choice Oxford Scholarship

This chapter explores the meanings of choice in Paradise Lost. The chapter analyses the diverse uses of the term, exploring particularly the ways in which different characters understand and use the idea in different ways, some of which the poem invites us to correct. The exploration of this idea therefore forms part of the education of Milton's reader.

Conclusion An Echo Not a Choice Oxford Scholarship

The Long Southern Strategy was long because all three components of the strategy choosing to exploit white racial angst, fear of feminism, and evangelical righteousness were necessary to build a solid red base in the states of the old Confederacy. The stark polarization that resulted from these partisan choices unraveled the New Deal coalition.
